

GET YOUR OWN BLOG | FLAG? | NEXT BLOG »

BlogThis!

Missile Silos and Mischief

Nebraska spelunking...

Saturday, December 24, 2005

Silo number 2...

Well it since the last post I have visited and entered 2 more missile silos. A couple of the guys in the dorm who were ever so unfortunately stuck in the dormitory over thanksgiving break started exploring these silos. The second one I entered was the worse of three I have visited so far. There was a bunch more water in this one and there were a few dead snakes floating in the water. The entry portal had been plowed over so we had to crawl down trough this small dirt opening around rebar and slide down a dirt slide. It was quite scary actually. The command center was very trashed and the silo mostly full of water. To get to this silo we ended up having to trudge through about 3/4 of a mile in the corn field at night. We had to cross a large stream and got stuck in a bunch of branches. But all and all it was worth it.

This is the entrance hole where the portal used to be... and yes that is a very small muddy hole.

it. and it was quite gross!

This one definitely had a lot of water in

This is some mineral deposits forming from the ceiling in the entrance to the first floor of the launch command center.

Josh and I at the edge of the silo.

This silo was pretty crappy but it was still cool to see. only 10 more after this one!!!

posted by Josh's Mischief Site @ 5:06 PM

0 Comments:

Post a Comment

<< Home

About Me

Name:Josh's Mischief Site

Location:Nebraska

View my complete profile

Previous Posts

- Number 3 the first time...
- Silo number 3...
- Silo number 4...

